Plot Summary

Under the direction of small town community leader Marla Larson, five local stage actors are drafting an adaptation of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol.

Being a local advocate for elderly persons, Marla's goal has for a long time been to create a play that focuses on the social problem of the financial exploitation of the elderly. In particular, she has for some time been obsessed with the idea of turning the Dickens story on its head to do so.

All is not, though, as it might at first appear. While the actors are working together to create their adaptation, Marla is cleverly guiding their efforts to other, secret ends.

Within their small town, a conspiracy is brewing to unseat Marla's husband Judge Tom Larson from his seat on the bench and replace him with a local attorney. Under Marla's careful direction, the group's adaptation is being crafted into a not-too-thinly veiled exposure of these and other nefarious goings-on. In making the plotters aware they have been and are being watched, Marla's goal is to make them cease and desist from their conspiracy against her family.

All the while, there are unknown forces working towards other ends Marla cannot understand.

Structure

The main story line of this film has two interwoven parts: (1) the "real life story" about a group of actors creating a play, and (2) the play they are constructing itself. The film's screenplay will require three actors to play two separate roles, one as a "real life story" character, and the other as a character in the play his or her character is helping produce.

Character Profiles

Marla Larson, 50s, is the wife of a local judge and a leading volunteer in her community. Among the different causes Marla works for is that of preventing the abuse and financial exploitation of older persons. One of her other passions is community theater, in which she has decades of experience as both an actor and director.

Tys Kruge (ties kroog-eh), 60s or 70s, is a retired policeman and part-time private investigator. Along with Marla Larson, the writers are ostensibly basing his character, Gene Carter, on Scrooge.

Paul Siegrist, 40 +/-, is a local dentist. He is creating a character named Brian Weller, an associate of local lawyer Mark Wensel. Paul carries much of narrative load onstage and in voiceover.

Pam Wells, 25-35, works for the US Department of Defense. Her character is Tammy Carter, the niece of a man with Alzheimer's type symptoms. Pam is a single mother, recently divorced and raising two young boys. Her character Tammy is manipulating her uncle Gene and other go get his money.

Mike Brannigan, 25-35, is a groundskeeper at a local cemetery. He is creating a character named Mark Wensel, a local attorney helping Lisa to fleece her uncle. Mike is divorced from Lisa (Birken) Brannigan and they have a young girl named Brianna Brannigan. Mike is romantically interested in Pam Wells.

Lisa Brannigan, 25-35, works as a clerk at a frame shop. She is the ex-wife of Mike Brannigan, the mother of Brianna Brannigan, and the niece newly financial guardian of a man with Alzheimer's disease. She is also the lover of both Judge Tom Larson and attorney Jack Wells.

Allison Carter, 25-35, works at home. She is the daughter-in-law of Gene Carter and the wife of Nick Carter.
